

POPE MAKES 7 CARDINALS.

NO AMERICAN NAMED AT CONSISTORY YESTERDAY.

That One or Two May Be Created in June—Plus Spikes With Emotion of Troubles in France—Italian Majority of Twelve in the College Not Increased.

Special Cable Despatches to THE SUN.

Rome, April 15.—A consistory was held today, as announced, and the Pope appointed seven new Cardinals. Five of them are Italians, one a Belgian and one a Spaniard. The Italian majority of twelve in the Sacred College therefore remains unchanged.

These are the Church dignitaries selected to receive the red hat: Aristide Rinaldi, Patriarch of Venice; Aristide Rinaldi, Archbishop of Heraclea; Benedetto Lorenzelli, Archbishop of Lucca and former Nuncio at Paris.

Alessandro Luadi, Archbishop of Palermo; Disiré Mercier, Archbishop of Mechlin; Pietro Mafr, Archbishop of Pisa; Gregorio Maria Aguirre y Garcia, Archbishop of Burgos.

The Pope delivered an allocution of considerable length, dealing mainly with the situation in France. He spoke in a firm voice, which faltered with emotion only when he alluded to his love for France.

The allocution is considered in Vatican circles as containing a warning to the Pope's future attitude as regards France, which will be one of calm resignation, such as befits the head of the Christian Church.

His announcement of his acceptance and recognition of the republic is intended to confute the reports of a plot against the republic, invented by "Clementine." It is significant as the first announcement of that policy.

An allusion which the Pope made to the Montaigni documents was in mild form and intended seemingly to show that the Vatican spurns a policy of reprisals. His concluding words are meant to give encouragement to French Catholics to continue to hope for better days.

Throughout the allocution the Pope used Christ's Passion as a symbol of the continual conflicts of the Church, especially those with France. These were the more sorrowful, he said, owing to his love for the nation in whose joys and sorrows he felt as if they were his own.

The French Government, not content with the abolition of the Concordat, had violently despoiled the Church, had ignored the ancient and true glories of the country and was now striving to uproot from the souls of Frenchmen every religious idea.

It had not neglected to commit excesses which were repugnant to French morality, violating, with great injury, all private and public laws, culminating the episcopate and clergy, attempting to separate it from the Church and undermining the mutual trust that exists between them.

The Government of France was trying all means, with evident sophisms, to confuse the institutions and régime of the country, with a view of accusing the Pope of opposing the form of popular government, which has always been accepted and respected as the Holy See. The Pope said he was pleased that notwithstanding the arts of the enemy the unity of the French episcopate had been maintained between themselves. The clergy and the people had been faithful to the Holy See and France.

The Pope declared that he would not cease the performance of his sacred duty on behalf of the welfare of a people so dear to him. To hatred would be opposed love, to error truth, to insults and maledictions forgiveness, praying meanwhile to God that the enemies of religion would cease their persecutions.

Thus, when the liberty of the Church had been regained, everybody, even non-Catholics—but only the lovers of liberty and honesty—will cooperate with the Pope to the common good and prosperity of their country.

London, April 15.—The home correspondent of the Standard says that Bishop O'Connell of Sioux Falls, N. D., has been positively assured by the Vatican that the Pope at the next Consistory, which, it is understood, will be held next June, will satisfy the just aspirations of the United States and will create one American Cardinal and perhaps two Cardinals.

The creation of seven new Cardinals makes a total membership of sixty-two in the Sacred College. There are thirty-seven Italians and twenty-five foreigners. Five years ago there were sixty-seven Cardinals, there were only eighteen of them non-Italians. For several weeks past it was feared that the present Pope was about to allow the Italian element another member to its majority, which would have given them thirty and thereby established a precedent for succeeding Popes, who might have been tempted to gradually restore the old Italian majority of forty-nine. But at the last moment the Pope assigned to counsel and appointed the Bishop of Burgos, Spain, a Cardinal.

This is the third creation of Cardinals under Pius X. In 1903 he gave red hats to Derry of Val and Calligari. The latter is dead. In 1905 Samassa, Arcoveggio de Albuquerque, Cagliostro de Azavedo and Spindola y Nastro were created Cardinals. The last named Cardinal also is dead.

Pietro Mafr, the new Cardinal of Curia, who will this week leave the famous Primate's See of Tuscany and remain at Rome as one of the counselors of Pius X, is not a native of Tuscany. He is a native of the time last year the city of Pisa celebrated the silver jubilee of his ordination. Before he was a priest he was a newspaper correspondent for local papers and was correspondent for Roman dailies and several foreign dailies. As he grew older his mind leaned toward the sciences. After his ordination he was professor of physics and the natural sciences at Pisa Seminary. He built an observatory at Pisa and also later organized the Vatican observatory, which of itself was regarded as a monumental task. While at the seminary in Pisa he owned and edited Il Tiro, a weekly paper. On the death of Mgr. Capponi he was appointed to the See of Tuscany. This was the last consistory nomination of Leo XIII. Cardinal Mafr is head of the scientific movement now sweeping Italy and has presided over several big meetings of scientists from all parts of the world. In addition to his work as a theologian, physicist and newspaper man the Cardinal has written several novels. One of them, "The Village Hawks," is said to be his last effort in this line.

The new Cardinal for Belgium has a weakness for research. He is a psychologist. He is burdened with a long name: Pierre-Felicien-Francois-Joseph-Mercier. He is five years younger than Mafr and succeeded the late Cardinal Georges Primate of Belgium. He was president of the Leo XIII. Seminary and of the Institute of Philosophy at the University of Louvain. His principal scientific work is "The Sources of Contemporary Psychology." Cardinal Mercier is a follower of the Aristotelian philosophy and of the leaders of the Scholastic school.

Cardinal Lorenzelli will always be remembered as the Nuncio at Paris prior to the breaking off of diplomatic relations between the Vatican and the French Government. He represented the Vatican at the Hague for three years and later was at St. Petersburg. He has written several theological treatises. In 1894 he succeeded Mgr. Chailardi as Archbishop of Luca. He is about the same age as Cardinal Mercier.

Cardinal Cavallari, like his predecessor in the patriarchate of Venice, now the Pope, is more noted for his simple piety and sense of justice than for his intellectual attainments. He is the youngest of the group of Cardinals just created. He was born in Chioggia, in the diocese of Venice, in 1818 and has the appearance of a man of 70. He was Archbishop of San Pietro del Castello when named successor to Pius X, at Venice.

Cardinal Luadi was born at Milan forty-nine years ago. He comes from an old and wealthy Lombard family. He gave his entire fortune to the Lombard Seminary at Rome, for the founding of which Cardinal Borromeo gave $20,000. He was professor in the Grand Seminary at Milan for several years, then became rector of the Lombard institution, which he put on a high intellectual plane. Some of the most gifted clergymen of the Catholic Church have come out of Lombard Seminary. He is at present Archbishop of Palermo, and at the time of his nomination to that see Pius X. remarked that it was "necessary graft a Lombard branch to a Sicilian trunk."

Cardinal Rinaldi is the Papal Nuncio at Madrid. He will represent the Pope at the baptism of the expected heir to the King of Spain. He was born in Montefalco in 1841 and has been in the diplomatic service since 1868, in which year he was sent to Lisbon as Secretary of the Nunciature. He was Under Secretary of State under Leo XIII. from 1891 until 1896. He is the oldest of the group.

DETECTIVE BUREAU CLEANUP.

BINGHAM WILL BE READY TO ACT WHEN BILL IS SIGNED.

Young Men Now Pounding the Walls Will Have a Chance to Replace the Deadwood—A Civilian to Be the Boss Sleuth—Inspector McLaughlin Will Retire.

While Commissioner Bingham would not discuss yesterday his proposed reorganization of the Police Department, it became known that he has already laid plans for shaking up the detective bureau. As soon as the bill is signed by Gov. Hughes the Commissioner will be in a position to have the deadwood and install new timber and it won't take him long to make a clean sweep.

Second Deputy Bugher sent a telephone order yesterday to all the precinct commanders in the city instructing them to forward the names and records of patrolmen likely to make good detectives. The present members of the sleuth corps have said right along that if Gen. Bingham attempted to clean out the bureau in a wholesale manner he would demoralize the detective system and that within a few days crooks would flock here from all parts of the country and crime would be rampant.

Commissioner Bingham, however, is going to take a chance, and he is determined to get rid of every dead one who has been drawing $2,000 a year and doing nothing but look wise. Of the 350 men who now comprise the corps the Commissioner believes that there are probably thirty men and no more, who are fit to be detectives.

It is no secret that Inspector William McLaughlin will be deposed as soon as the bill becomes a law and will make way for a civilian who will take charge of the bureau. While McLaughlin is the best man the Commissioner could get to command the detectives, his management of the bureau has not been satisfactory, and Gen. Bingham has made up his mind to say it. McLaughlin, it is known, will retire as soon as he is removed from the bureau.

The patrolmen Commissioner Bingham is selecting for the detective bureau are mostly young men of more than ordinary intelligence, and while many of them have done nothing but pound the walls, they have been in the department the Commissioner is going to give them a chance to develop any detective ability they may possess. Professional men and those who speak foreign languages will stand a good show of going to the Central Office.

Most of the present members are slated to be relegated to the command of precincts, and the Commissioner has already picked the captains whom he will put in charge of the inspection districts. It is expected that at least seven or eight of the inspectors will retire, and a big bunch of detective sergeants will follow suit.

Two Hundred and Twenty-nine USED PIANOS And Other Instruments Have Accumulated From Our Business of the Last Three Months Today They Are Priced for a Thorough Clearing Out

THE occasion will be of immense interest to the hundreds of people who are always willing to sacrifice the sentiment about newness in order to secure quality far above what the same amount of money could buy in a new instrument.

This great piano business accumulates vast numbers of pianos and other instruments, which we take in exchange from people buying new instruments. And our policy of sending out only new pianos for rental obliges us to sell the slightly used instrument when it comes in. These pianos are good as new, of course; and when tuned and polished no one could tell that they were not brand-new, unless we told them otherwise. There is a large number of these fine little-used instruments in this offering.

Those that have been used more, and those that may have been abused, are reduced in price accordingly—the most decisive reductions of the year.

A splendid opportunity for beginners in music. A rare chance for those who are fitting out country houses and do not wish to expose their fine pianos in the removal.

In addition to the regular pianos, there are Knabe-Angelus and Emerson-Angelus Pianos; also Autopianos, Angelus Piano-Players and other players, and Symphony Organs and Orchestrelles.

See the list. Note the savings; and remember that any instrument may be bought on easy monthly instalments. But be early for best choice.
